

Collaborations are sites where the Carework Network partners with another entity to produce knowledge or action. It could be a panel at one of our Summits or Virtual Events; it could be a shared resource, such as a publication or advocacy document.

Here are some examples of our recent collaborations.

2025

Duke University collaborated with the Carework Network to host our 4th Global Carework Summit, “Histories and Futures of Care”, in June 2025. The program lists all sponsors. Here we highlight a few collaborations during the Summit.

Sarah Flood from IPUMS presented a carework data workshop, “Measuring the Care Economy in the U.S.: Understanding Data Sources and Gaps.”

Friedrich Ebert Foundation (Caribe/México/Perú) sponsored and organized a session with activists titled: “Care in community: Lessons and challenges from civil society.”

Caring across Generations presented in a session of activists and academics entitled “Continuity and Change in the Social Organization of Home-based Care work.”

The International Journal of Care and Caring published a summary of the 4th Global Carework Summit, Histories and Futures of Care.

2024

The Century Foundation collaborated with the Carework Network to host a discussion of the edited volume From Crisis to Catastrophe: Care, COVID, and Pathways to Change.

2023

The University of Costa Rica collaborated with the Carework Network to host our 3rd Global Carework Summit, “Carework in uncertain times: Convergences and divergences around the world”, in June 2023. The program lists all sponsors. Here we highlight a few collaborations during the Summit.

The ILO, Unicef, and UN Women participated in a panel titled Building a policy-relevant care research agenda in the wake of COVID-19.

Friedrich Ebert Foundation (Central America and Costa Rica) sponsored & organized a Public Dialogue with leaders of domestic worker associations, entitled Domestic employment in Central America: progress, challenges and links with the care agenda.

The International Journal of Care and Caring published a summary of the 3rd Global Carework Summit, titled Carework in Uncertain Times: Convergences and Divergences around the world.

Revaluing Care in the Global Economy published a blog about the 3rd Carework Network Global Summit.

Social Politics: International Studies in Gender, State & Society published a Special Issue of contributions from the 3rd Carework Network Global Summit, entitled Care policy across the Americas: Convergences and divergences.

2019

The University of Toronto, Mississauga and Tri-Campus Graduate Sociology Department collaborated with the Carework Network to host our 2nd Global Carework Summit in June 2019. The program lists all sponsors. Here are a few collaborations during the Summit.

The Caregivers Action Centre, Toronto, and the U.S. National Domestic Workers Association presented in a session of advocates and academics entitled Organizing Care Workers: Innovative Strategies from Domestic Worker Organizing across Asia and North America.

The Growth and Economic Opportunities for Women (GrOW) program of the International Development Research Centre sponsored the Keynote address, entitled The Feminization of the Care Labor Force (pg. 80).

The Gender, Migration and Work of Care project from the Centre for Global Social Policy organized workshops for post-doctoral researchers and doctoral students.

United Voice Australia and Service Employees International Union-Healthcare Ontario presented in a panel of advocates and academics, entitled Coalitions in Carework (pg. 152).

The International Journal of Care and Caring published a review of the 2nd Global Carework Summit entitled Continuing Global Conversations about Care, and a Special Issue entitled “The Changing Character of Care Work: New Risks and Responses.”

2017

The University of Massachusetts Lowell Center for Women and Work collaborated with the Carework Network to host the 1st Global Carework Summit June 2017. The program lists all sponsors. Here we highlight a few collaborations during the Summit.

Caring Across Generations, Hand in Hand, National Domestic Workers Alliance, International Domestic Workers Federation and UCLA Labor Center presented in a panel of advocates, entitled Dignity in the Home: Organizing for Dignity for Caregivers and Recipients.

UN Women, Chief of Research and Data Section gave the opening keynote, entitled, Unequal Worlds of Care: Global and Local Dynamics.

The Brazilian Workers' Center and Service Employees International Union (1199) presented at a session of advocates and academics entitled Organizing Care Workers in New England: Creative Strategies.

The International Journal of Care and Caring published a review of our 1st Global Carework Summit, entitled Global Conversations about Care.